

Apiax expands management team with experienced sales and customer success professionals to support dynamic growth

Zurich, May 18, 2021 - Mark Holden and Jerome Salaun take over Apiax's Enterprise Sales and Customer Success teams during a period of dynamic growth and support the company in the next phase of its ambitious expansion plans.

Apiax today announces Jerome Salaun as its new Head of Customer Success and Mark Holden as its new Global Head of Enterprise Sales. Mark and Jerome join a company of now more than 70 professionals across 5 locations with more than 15 clients.

Philip Schoch, CEO of Apiax, says: "Apiax is at a crossroads. We have now acquired and onboarded more than 15 clients. Jerome and Mark are the perfect addition to our team. Together they bring more than 35 years of experience in corporate sales and customer success to the table. We look forward to working with them."

Mark Holden has more than 20 years of experience in senior sales positions in financial services. Jerome Salaun has more than 15 years of experience in building and leading customer success teams for SaaS companies.

Mark Holden, Global Head of Enterprise Sales at Apiax, says: "I am extremely pleased to join Apiax at this stage in their journey. For such a young company the recent rapid growth is testament to the value Apiax brings to our clients in digitising the complex regulatory landscape, generating real and tangible business value".

Jerome Salaun, Head of Customer Success, says: "I am very excited to join Apiax. My goal is to provide our customers with the best experience from the time they onboard and help them succeed in their business with Apiax".

Now with more than 70 employees in 5 locations and more than 15 clients, Apiax has become a leader in the regulatory technology space.
